Team Yes! Aquatics of Houston

Team Yes! Aquatics of Houston, a nonprofit, year round USA Swimming competitive swim team, is pleased to introduce John Berry as the new head coach. Team YES! is located in the Cy-Fair area and offer practices at the Cy-Falls and Cy-Springs High School facilities.

Coach Berry holds a B.A. in Kinesiology & Business Management with a Minor in Sociology from Ouachita Baptist University, Arkadelphia, AR.

Team YES! recognizes that each swimmer has his or her own goals and it is our objective to help your swimmer achieve those goals. Our mission is to emphasize superior technique for each and every program we offer. Our programs range from "learn to swim" for the beginner to the competitive program for more advanced and high school level swimmers. Our practice schedule is designed to keep the groups small so that each participating swimmer receives individual attention and focused technique instruction.

Registration for the 2005-2006 swim season is scheduled to be held at Cy-Falls High School in the swimming pool area on August 14, 2005, from 2:00 PM to 4:00 PM. For more information visit our website at www.teamyes.net or call and leave a message on our voice mail at 281-443-4002.

Musings on Art

In my five-plus years of being a mom, there are four words I've come to dread more than any other: "This is for you."

You may have noticed as you drive by our house that it is lower to the ground than it used to be. That's because my older daughter is absolutely addicted to drawing, coloring, marking and painting. If it has to do with art, she is all over it. And usually, it is all over her.

It wouldn't be so bad if she just colored at home. But oh, no. We go to the gym and she colors while she's in child care. She goes to preschool and she colors. She goes to Sunday school and she colors. During Wednesday night service, she colors. And in her opinion, every creation of hers is a masterpiece and needs to be kept for perpetuity.

To make matters worse, she's a little trash can diver. She will go through the trash can to make sure I haven't thrown any drawings away. It could be a monochromatic coloring from a coloring book that she spent a total of forty-five seconds on, but if I have the audacity to throw it away, I am confronted with outrage like you have never seen.

"This was SPECIAL," she will tell me, her eyes bright and unblinking. "I MADE this for YOU."

It's all my fault, of course. I made the mistake of taking the very first drawing she made of our family (consisting of a drawing of me, her, a cat, and a drawing of me as a baby) and putting it in her scrapbook, thus instilling in her the expectation that her drawings are SPECIAL and need to be kept FOREVER. It was really hard for me to convince her that her fifty-seventh portrait of our family was not quite as special as that very first one.

I've developed a coping strategy, though. It's called Send Them to Grandma. That, and secret forays out to the trash bin after midnight. So, if you see me tiptoeing out to the trash bin at the curb late some Sunday or Wednesday night with a decidedly opaque trash bag full of paper, DON'T HONK. Just stop by for some free art. Please.

Do Your 'Homework' Early Before Traveling Abroad

Baylor College of Medicine

HOUSTON – (June 17, 2005) – Headed to a tropical resort or for an exotic safari? Learn about possible health risks before skipping town, say physicians at Baylor College of Medicine (BCM) in Houston.

"There are many differences in terms of health risks based on what part of the world you are visiting, how long you will be gone, and what types of activities you are doing," said Dr. James Kelaher, assistant professor of medicine and director of occupational health at BCM. "Even within a small region, there can be big differences regarding health safety risks between cities and rural areas."

International travelers should consult their primary care physician or a local clinic with a travel center. Kelaher also recommends doing research about health safety in the region of interest.

"There can be outbreaks like polio or malaria in some parts of the world that vary in intensity at different times the year, so you need to get the latest information," Kelaher said.

In addition to reading up on infectious disease, travelers must prepare for injuries they could sustain from motor vehicle accidents and other health and safety hazard risks. Some health services may not be available at hospitals or clinics where they are heading.

Kelaher recommends that the following steps be taken before departing:

- Consult the Center for Disease Control (<http://www.cdc.gov/travel>), which offers detailed resources that assess varying health risks in different parts of the world.
- Check in advance on visa and admission requirements of the country you plan to visit. Some vaccines and health services may be required for entry.
- Consider getting health insurance for traveling abroad. Many health services overseas are expensive and available on a cash-only basis. Also, insurance companies are often limited to reimbursement of out-of-pocket expenses after the fact rather than direct correspondence with foreign hospitals.
- Assemble a "traveler's pack" with medical supplies such as additives that can purify water. While overseas, drink bottled water, and find out how your food is washed and handled.

Above all else, Kelaher recommends that travelers not wait until the last minute to get immunized.

"Some vaccines are hard to find, and others can be a multi-shot series that may take months to be fully immunized," said Kelaher. "As soon as you know where and when you are going, get your vaccine records together and contact your doctor. Good planning helps."
