Thank You to Celine Wilson!

Celine Wilson recently resigned after a seven year term as a resident board member of the Summerwood Community Association. That is the longest any resident has served on the Community Association Board. While we will miss her passion and service, we understand the need for a respite.

Not only did Celine serve on the Board but she was also involved in the Beautification Committee and was co-editor of the newsletter. She attended many of the Crime Watch and Pool Committee meetings to have a better understanding of the important issues impacting the community. This involvement made her an effective Board member because she had an opportunity to hear what was important to the residents.

During her term, Celine was interested in reforestation of trees since many were lost during Hurricane Ike. She loves the natural beauty of Summerwood and you can see her and her family enjoying the greenbelts almost daily. Major improvements over the seven years included upgrades to the entry fountains, major refurbishing of the Central Clubhouse interior and exterior, and expansion of the fitness center area.

In recognition of Celine's tireless community service, a tree will be planted in her honor. The Board of Directors would like to thank Celine for her hard work and dedication the last seven years. It has been a pleasure serving with her.

CRAZY ANTS - PARATRECHINA LONGICORNIS

Information compiled from Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service.

The recommended way to control these ants is through professional pest control. Fire ant baits and other home pesticides are generally ineffective. As they continue to invade, Raspberry crazy ants decrease home and property values and could impact agriculture — both livestock and crops. Their activity has damaged electrical equipment and could affect computer systems, traffic signals, businesses, schools, airports, and hospitals.

The life history of this species is poorly known. Crazy ant colonies tend to be small to moderately sized, containing as many as 2,000 workers and 40 queens. Mating flights have not been observed; colonies possibly split and form new colonies by budding. Crazy ants are highly adaptable in their nesting habits and can live in habitats that are very dry or relatively moist. Colonies are highly mobile and relocate when conditions become unfavorable. Outside, they nest in rotten wood, fallen tree limbs and logs, tree stumps, under stones, bricks and lumber. They often are found in the soil of potted plants. Numerous colonies may be found around plant roots in mulched plant beds. Queens, brood and attending worker ants often are found in curled leaves littering these plant beds. Inside, crazy ants often nest in wall voids and beneath floors, particularly near hot-water pipes and heaters.

The foundation of any pest strategy is cultural control methods. These begin with the removal of harborage such as fallen limbs, rocks, leaf litter, and just about anything sitting on the ground that isn't absolutely necessary. Cultural methods can also include altering the moisture conditions in a landscape:

Crazy ants prefer humid, wet conditions so reducing the amount of irrigation, repairing leaks, and improving drainage should help. Entrances into structures should be eliminated or minimized by caulking exterior penetration zones and through the use of weather-stripping. Food sources should be eliminated or managed. Specifically honeydew producing hemipterans should be managed.

Chemical control: Contact insecticides should be sprayed around structures such as homes, businesses, and barns to create a barrier.

Products containing fipronil (e.g., Termidor®) are an excellent choice for perimeter contact insecticides for crazy ant management.

An indoor crack and crevice regime with a product containing chlorfenapyr (e.g., Phantom®) has been effective for this species.

As many nesting sites as can possibly be found should be sprayed using a product with beta-cyfluthrin (e.g., Temprid®) or bifenthrin (e.g., Talstar®) which have directions on their product labels that allows for such usage. Granular ant baits, such as Advance® Carpenter Ant Bait (abamectin) and Maxforce® Granular Insect Bait (hydramethylnon), are both attractive and effective at killing crazy ants.

A granular bait should be selected for broadcasting throughout the infestation. Liquid carbohydrate baits should be strategically placed in high crazy ant traffic areas. PCOs need access to an entire infestation in order to achieve an acceptable level of management. Otherwise, the population will rebound from surrounding, untreated sites.
