A LITTLE BIT OF VITAMIN N

"Help start a school garden. Read more about the many benefits of school gardens, and learn about school gardening projects at KidsGardening.org. Sensory gardens use plant life, scented herbs, smooth river rocks, and other natural elements to stimulate the five basic senses and other, lesser-known vestibular, proprioceptive, and kinesthetic senses, among others. These gardens (as all school gardens should be) are designed for universal access – meaning for students with or without cognitive or physical disabilities."

Keep your pet anxiety free this July 4th

By Dr. Stacy Mozisek, Firehouse Animal Health Center

The 4th of July is a day to celebrate with barbecues, baseball games and, of course, fireworks. It's also one of the busiest days of the year for veterinarians and animal shelters because of fireworks.

Loud noises can trigger dogs' nervous systems causing a flight response, which is why lots of dogs run away on the 4th of July. Also, because dogs have sensitive hearing, loud bangs and pops can cause stress and anxiety attacks, which can lead to destructive actions in otherwise well-behaved dogs.

To help alleviate the stress of fireworks on dogs, here are eight tips to keep your pets safe while celebrating Independence Day.

- Prepare ahead of time. If you think your pet will have an issue, don't wait until the last minute to call your vet to discuss anxiety medications or sedatives. Starting a new medication on the same day as an event is never a safe idea because occasionally, some medications can cause the reverse effect or have no effect at all for some animals. In addition, stocks of these specialized medications can run low or be on backorder around holidays.

- Do not keep your dog outside, and if possible, keep your dog in a kennel. It creates a safe space for them as dogs have been known to jump through windows and glass doors as a response to fireworks.

- Consider boarding your pet if you will be out at a party. Sometimes being at home alone with the loud noises can turn a well-behaved dog into a destructive one or cause long-term behavioral issues.

- Turn on a white noise machine or the television to drown out the sound of fireworks and noisemakers.

- Purchase a ThunderShirt, which are designed to "swaddle" your dog, making them feel more secure.

- If you're having a party, make sure your pet is well-secured, not afraid of the fireworks, and comfortable with the sounds of crowds. If your pet suffers from anxiety due to loud noises, consider boarding or ask a friend to pet sit.

- If pets are present while you're setting off fireworks, make sure they stay a safe distance away. Dogs' and cats' hearing is extremely sensitive and can be damaged by the loud bangs. Also, dogs have been known to "fetch" lit fireworks which can cause serious burns and even death.

- Make sure your pet's microchip or collar tags are up-to-date so it's easy to track you down if he or she runs away scared during a fireworks display.

Fireworks don't have to be a source of anxiety for pet owners. By following these simple tips, you can ensure that both you and your fur-babies will experience a fun and relaxing 4th of July celebration.

Indoor Plants

Unless you have a sunroom or greenhouse, the biggest dilemma of having plants indoors is providing them with enough light. Even if you have windows, they may be less than ideal if they're facing in a direction that gets little sun, or if they're shaded by a tree or porch overhang. Plants suffering from light deprivation are often lanky, with pale or yellowed leaves. Luckily, you can lend a helping hand with artificial lighting. The best type of artificial light is fluorescent. Incandescent light doesn't provide the right kind of light for optimal growth, and it also produces lots of heat, which can burn your plants. Fluorescent light comes in several varieties: the standard ones, which you can find at any hardware store or home improvement center, are fine for growing small plants such as African violets, but for larger plants, go for higher-output fluorescents, which emit much more light and can be found at most well-equipped garden centers or through mail-order gardening supply catalogs. Bear in mind, too:

- * When growing plants under artificial light, choose those that prefer low to medium sunlight.

- * Keep your plants very close to the light source - no more than 6 to 12 inches away. The intensity of light diminishes drastically the farther away you move from it. To increase intensity, add more fluorescent tubes, grouped together.

- * Rearrange your plants regularly around their light source to ensure that they all receive equal exposure. The greatest amount of light is emitted from the center of a fluorescent tube.

- * Leave the lights on 14 to 16 hours each day. A couple of hours daily won't suffice. But don't leave the lights on all the time; plants need periods of darkness for rest.
