Editor's Comments

This publication serves many purposes—the most important are to keep our community informed, connect us to one another, and foster growth and development of businesses and entrepreneurial endeavors in and around Fairfield. The Gazette is all about supporting the home team!

In this issue, we are highlighting the current status of our local schools welcoming Rodney Garcia, the new Assistant Principal of Ault Elementary, featuring upcoming events at Keith, and giving parents and caregivers a heads up on how to get their 6th-graders comfortably enrolled in and settled at Salyard's Middle School.

Our August entrepreneurial story features an interview with Rachel Lewis, a professional influencer who has become a staple in the hospitality industries' social media/digital marketing circuit. See her story on page 9.

We are also proud to introduce Deborah Worley, the Fairfield Women's Club's new Yard of the Month Chairman. Her story is on page 12.

All around us, there are signs of the growing influence of Fairfield residents. Please see reader Shawn's comments. They reinforce why we highlight our local personalities.

Quite frankly, you never know when another one of us will begin attracting a following, promoting a brand, building a business—and in effect influencing positive change in our community.

That is why I do what I do. I want to be part of the rising chorus of individual voices, big and small, on a wide range of issues—cheering our community on!

So, thank you to everyone who believes in what I do.

If you have ideas for topics you'd like to see included in the Fairfield Community Gazette, or if you just want to give me some feedback, email me at jackiedevine@peelinc.com.

We Love Our Reader's Comments:

Great article on Mr. Dan in July's issue. Thank you for featuring him.
Lorie Roff

Dear Jackie,

It was nice meeting you at Central Park on July 4th. I shared my opinion about the changes in the Fairfield Gazette, and said I enjoyed reading it. It has a lot of informative content. I noticed The Gazette now has articles from residents, which is nice. I am not sure who wrote those articles, the family themselves or journalist, and I wonder how these families were chosen. Nevertheless, I think these contents are relevant and make reading them more fun. I also like that peelinc.com now has a full content online copy with those advertisements. If I ever misplace the hardcopy, I can always search online to get the info. Please keep up the excellent work. Best regards, Shawn, Resident since 2004

The Meaning of Life by Stacey Gresell

When my daughter was just a tiny thing, barely walking, we were out in the yard exploring... at least that's the way it is remembered in my perfect parent mind. Truth is I was weeding and glancing every so often to make sure she didn't eat a bug. That's when a perfectly innocent toad hopped by.

I'll never forget her expression. She laughed and laughed as if it was the funniest thing a human being had ever laid witness to; one of those baby belly guffaws that makes your own eyes water. She waddled behind that poor frog forever just busting a gut every time he hopped. Still makes me smile because of her pure joy, her discovery and wonder.

We probably all have stories like that, but if your kids are entering high school those stories are getting dusty. If your children are small still, then dustier folk like me are telling you to cherish those moments. You say "Of course!" but you won't really understand until they happen to you again.

Those moments of wonder and discovery happened to us again last fall in a fairly unique way. We got a new daughter. We picked ours up from the airport with signs and fanfare. I still remember her polite smiles in the backseat as she got bombarded with ridiculous questions- "You're from Italy? Did you live in the heel or the toe? Do you eat pasta every day? Do you have a car?"

You may wonder as I did once, why would anyone do this? Why would anyone add to the chaos of their life by adopting a foreign exchange student for a year?

There are a lot of lofty answers like...you can learn another language. We didn't. You will gain an expanded view on international perspectives. Nope. You will have a greater focus on life and academics.

I had three kids. I was drowning in life and academics already. So why? My answer might surprise you. I wanted to be a good mom again.

We always put on the very best sides of ourselves for... others. Not our family. We are the kindest, most patient, most gracious and giving for friends and acquaintances and save the tale of our bad day, our cruddy mood and exhaustion for the people who supposedly mean the most to us. In front of our own mother we are super mom but the minute she leaves we are begging a dirty child to take a bath and bribing them with candy if they'll do it without crying—you know you've done it.

Every parent worries about their kids and about being a good parent but it's hard. It's even harder when you both work. It's even harder when you have no family nearby. It's even harder when... I could continue but I'm sure you know as well as I do that the excuse train could ride the rails for a while.

I needed to resurrect the patient, funny and sweet mom who was always willing to hold your toad while you went potty. I wanted some version of that mom to come back.

Chiara brought her back. Chiara made me snuggly on the couch again. Chiara made me review English papers again. Chiara made me laugh and roll my eyes with a smile on my face. She made me think about my rules and the rationale for them; and reminded me of the importance of explaining them. Chiara was the kind of kid who would come downstairs, see me making dinner and just slide in gently beside me and start chopping garlic. She'd tell me about her day and ask about mine with genuine interest. It was only then that I realized I hadn't been doing these kinds of things with my own kids very often, not really.

I had gotten tired and allowed myself to check out way too often. But with unfamiliar eyes on me, I dug a little deeper to the better mom that was always still there but had become complacent.

Having a foreign exchange student living in your home will certainly mean a lot of those lofty things. You will learn more about incredible places, taste wonderful food, and witness discovery and wonder again through a child's eyes. But you might also find that dusty side of yourself, try it back on and live it again.

I have four kids: three that I made and 1 who remade me.

A Star Among Us by Jackie Devine

Do you recognize this woman? Well, if you've listened to drive time news, picked up a newspaper, flipped on the TV, or checked out her Facebook feed during Houston's world-renowned Wine and Food Week, you know she is a significant part of the wine and foodie scene.

Be that as it may—expertise and star quality aside—Rachel Lewis has a number of other impressive claims to fame. She is the proud mother of three outstanding sons, Oliver 12, Sawyer 9, and Samuel 7, runs a 21st Century, cutting-edge social media marketing firm, and last, but not least, she lives in the hood—our Fairfield neighborhood that is!

Rachel and I met at Ault Elementary on the last day of school waiting to usher in our respective end of the year parties. I listened as she was explaining to the gentleman across from me her involvement in the hospitality event circuit and her recent participation in Houston's Wine and Food Week festivities.

On the spot, I asked for an interview. Elegant and sophisticated, yet kind and gracious, she accepted my request.

Visionary Rachel Lewis is the owner and operator of Hometown Social, a five-year-old digital marketing and PR firm that focuses on the hospitality industry and targets the restaurant and food scene.

"Although I include digital marketing, advertising, graphics and connection with a variety of media platforms in my services rendered, the majority of my business is social media marketing and reputation management, namely through Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, Yelp, Trip Advisor, Google and a variety of other similar platforms," she explained. "I've spent years studying and analyzing the evolving science behind the point of sales systems, loyalty programs, and working with algorithms to guide every decision I make on behalf of my clients so that I can leverage their marketing dollar and move seats in their restaurants.

"For example," she adds, "when I sign on a new client, I take two weeks to analyze, investigate and research their activity. I look at their standing in the community, and not only what's working and what's not, but also what makes sense going forward. Then, I develop a strategy in line with their business objectives targeted to increasing influence and maximizing brand exposure."

Listening to Rachel, it became apparent that relationships are at the core of everything she does. Her connections are vital to producing effective communication between the media and publicists—each feeding upon the other. She says, "The media needs publicists for their stories, and we need them to write about our clients."

I asked her how she attracted business. She replied, "The reasons are numerous, but the major one is they need marketing support but don't require a person full-time in-house. Companies are beginning to contract out those services rather than hire someone to work a 40-hour week.

"Then, there are other times I'm called in because a company is in trouble. I'm always eager to help, but at the same time, I'm cautious about not overpromising and underdelivering," she commented. "If a restaurant calls me for a Hail Mary, in a last-ditch attempt to stay afloat, I'm going to do everything I can to help, but I never promise to have a silver bullet."

Reputation management and monitoring notifications have become a significant part of the marketing strategy she offers to clients. Whether they are smaller restaurant groups like her Cypress clients or more massive conglomerates that have a national presence, they recognize that reviews can be critical, even make or break their business.

Beaming, Rachel smiled, "One of the favorite parts of my job, is the event circuit. I especially enjoy Wine and Food Week, which offers ten events over the course of seven days, attracting chefs and wines from all over the world. It offers something for everyone, whether they are brand new to the wine world, or a connoisseur looking to grow their cellar or collection.

"I work with the media Fox 26, KHOU, Click2Houston, Houston Life, Great Day Houston, pretty much all of the local stations. Typically, I bring in a chef or a sommelier, and we'll talk about the dish that they are preparing. This year, Wine and Food Week's Master Sommelier was one of the only 215 Master Somms in the whole world. And the only one in Houston.

"Another area of fulfillment is my involvement with the charities tied to significant events that I represent. For example, New Danville—a self-sustaining, master-planned, integrated community where adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities live, learn, work, and grow—is the beneficiary of Wine and Food Week. Incredibly, residents operate their own farm, manage beehives, and make soap, which gives the adults the ability to live to their full potential.

"This last year, local event Katy Sip and Stroll focused on the Ballard House, which similar to the Ronald McDonald House, offers free housing to patients and caregivers coming to the Katy area for the treatment of life-threatening illnesses.

Around Fairfield

Rachel also handles the media and website for the Ballard House. "It's the most incredible place," she added. "If you are looking for a charity to work with, look at the Ballard House. It's 20 minutes south on Hwy. 99."

"Honestly, I feel it is a profound honor to work with all the charities I represent," she explained with sincerity. "I have always believed that whatever you do, whether it's teaching, practicing medicine, or working at Starbucks, you can find purpose in connecting with people—getting outside your own circumstances and helping others always enriches our lives."

As we neared the end of our interview, I asked my time-honored question, "Tell me what you've learned from life, what do you know for sure?"

Sighing deeply, she said, "I know for sure that community happens when you break bread and drink wine with people. Sitting down with someone, putting the world aside, sharing a meal and having a drink, help you connect in a way that you weren't connected before."

No doubt, Rachel had the right idea. According to the National Restaurant Association, millennials, although more likely than any other age group to use restaurant-related technology options are not the only demographic group to show interest in doing so. A significant proportion of consumers in the baby boomer generation are also using computers and smartphones when interacting with restaurants.

INDEPENDENT LIVING

They Cooked With Kim

by Jackie Devine

Kim Liberta, owner and operator of Cookin' With Kim delighted residents of Fairfield Creek Estates June 11th with a demonstration on how to prepare a quick and easy Stuffed Avocado and a mouth-watering Mediterranean Quinoa Salad that was not only good but also offered a healthy dietary alternative.

Kim is one of Fairfield's hidden treasures. She started working in the hospitality industry at age 16 at a local country club snack shop and never turned back! From there she went on to work on a dude ranch in Dubois, Wyoming while attending Culinary School. The ranch was located about three hours from Jackson Hole and the Grand Teton Mountains. She served as the assistant to the chef, preparing three meals a day. Several meals were prepared outside over campfires in the middle of the Rocky Mountains!

During the '90s, she obtained a Culinary of Arts Degree from Providence Rhode Island's prestigious Johnson and Wales University. Over the years, she has lived and worked in many large cities and small towns around the country, including Wolfgang Puck Café at the MGM Grand, Las Vegas and Real Restaurant Corp from San Francisco's Fog City Diner Concept in Las Vegas, San Francisco and Chicago.

But, her favorite position, which she obtained at the age of 30, was that of Executive Chef for the South Gate Group north of Chicago in Lake Forest, Illinois where she was running three concepts under one roof. There was an American Café, a French Bistro and a Take and Go bakery with fresh bread, breakfast, and lunch. She resigned as Chef when she was eight months pregnant after her cooks could no longer pass by her belly!

After the birth of her daughter, Lucynda (thirteen years ago), her title changed from Chef to Mom! Being a home cook was a new experience for her: no prep cook and no cleaning crew. It took her about a year to learn the tricks of that very different trade!

While living in Minnesota, while Lucynda was still a toddler, Kim developed KIM JAMS made with combinations of such originals as Raspberry Peach or Strawberry Grape (Lucy's favorite), and sold them at the local Farmers Market.

When Lucinda was two and a half they relocated to Cypress, Texas. Once settled into their new environment she joined a local MOMS Club, and in talking with parents, she found that many families struggled with preparing healthy meals every day. She learned that people were often hesitant to try new dishes and frequently found themselves trying to cook something in 30 minutes before running off to meetings, soccer games or dance practice.

That's where the concept of Cookin' with Kim began. Her business has taken many different turns since 2007. And now as a single mom, it is what supports them.

Kim says, "I am certainly blessed to awake every day loving my career, making mealtime easier for others, while continuing my most favorite job as Lucynda's Mom!"

We gather at 11:45 a.m., enjoy lunch from about 12:00-12:45 p.m., and then sit back and enjoy the program. In the five years we've been meeting, we've heard from local and national celebrities, authors, master gardeners, and even been entertained by a magician!

In September, we'll meet on September 10th. (one of the few times we move off of the first Monday to the second Monday due to a holiday---Labor Day Sept 3rd!)

Classic Adults is excited to welcome County Judge Ed Emmett as our guest speaker in September. Judge Emmett is the presiding officer of Harris County Commissioners Court. In his position, he serves as the director of the Harris County Office of Homeland Security and Emergency Management and represents the county on numerous boards, committees, and regional councils of governments.

Harris County, with a population of 4.7 million, is the third most populous county in the United States. Judge Emmett is a busy man! Join us as we learn more about our county government, what a county judge does, and how it affects us way out here in Cypress, Texas!

You do not have to be a member of Good Shepherd UMC to join Classic Adults. For more information and to register for the lunch go to the Good Shepherd website www.goodchurch.us and click on registrations. Or, you may call the church at 281-373-2273.

Fairfield's New Yard of the Month Chairperson by Jackie Devine

Meet Deborah Worley—a California transplant—who has assumed the reigns of the Fairfield Women's Club's Yard of the Month Chairperson.

Deborah and her husband Bruce Worley relocated to Fairfield in January. As Deborah smiled, she said, "We arrived in Texas psyched and eager to move into our lovely home. Neither the cold dreary day nor the sight of our vibrant green lawn and lush landscape laid to ruin by the brutal winter's freeze could still our excitement or damper our mood. We decided to have fun. While we were moving in, our neighbors began stopping by to introduce themselves. We took that as a good omen that we had made the right choice."

"Once settled, we didn't wait for people to come to us. We decided to put ourselves out there." Motioning with her hands, she said, "I picked up the Gazette and I leafed through it and found people to contact. I put out an e-mail saying, 'Hi, this is Deborah Worley, my husband Bruce and I just moved here from California. We want to get actively involved in our new Fairfield community. Get in touch with us and let us know what is going on. Amazingly, I got plenty of responses. That is where I found information on the Women's Club. I went to my first meeting in February, and joined at my second meeting in March."

"Immediately, because gardening is my passion, I volunteered to go out with Suzanne Thompson, our Yard of the Month Chairperson, because I knew it was helpful to have one or two volunteers riding along to discuss and select the properties.

It's also handy to have someone writing down the details.

"Then, Suzanne was elected vice president of the Fairfield Women's Club, a hectic, hectic job. She was going to give up the Yard of the Month position because she couldn't actually do both. I volunteered.

"I thought what an excellent way to learn about all the hidden communities in Fairfield. I find it a joyful job and look forward to it. And that is how I became Fairfield's new Yard of the Month Chairperson."

I asked the Worleys why they chose Texas over California. Bruce replied, "It is a long, involved story. In 1976, as the national sales manager for an Indiana controls, gages, and simulation firm, I opened a branch office in Houston. That stint lasted throughout the '80s. So, in effect, Houston became my "hometown." This was the place where I raised my kids. But, with my firm's growth and expansion, my expertise was needed in Anaheim California. As a newly divorced bachelor, I headed west and eventually spent 35 years in sunny California."

About 13 years ago, mutual friends arranged for Deborah and Bruce to meet. It took one casual dinner and a long afternoon of conversation for them to realize they were soul mates. The determining factor according to Deborah was, "He made me laugh! We were like two peas in a pod and fit like we had been together for 30 years." They married, purchased a house in Temecula and immersed themselves in the Golf community.

They immediately started connecting with other seniors and enjoyed a wide variety of activities with local residents. Like many seniors, health issues changes everything. They went through three years of life and death health issues. Bruce had a bypass, lung issues, congestive heart failure, and pneumonia. Deborah contracted heart problems, cancer, and underwent three surgeries. With all that trauma, they came to the conclusion, what matters most is family.

"Besides having family in the Houston area, the determining factor" explained Bruce, was the morality of the public didn't match our belief system in CA. Texas is a very patriotic state, it's family oriented with an emphasis on faith.

"The thing of it is, we both had friends everywhere in California." Deborah added, "Here, I knew zero people. But I feel at home. I am making friends daily. Bruce told me "Houston is a great place to live. People treat you decent. Everybody is your friend. And, you know, he was right. Everybody is so lovely, kind, and polite. And, we feel that we are home here, too. So for us, it was perfect."

The Worley's son Kyle and his wife Sara live in Katy and are expecting their first child. Jennifer and Phil have three children. Elijah, a Mississippi State University star baseball player, Emma who will graduate in August a year ahead of her class and super talented Ellie, the youngest. Deborah's son Justin, his wife Candice and their daughter still live in CA. They are incredibly proud of the accomplishments of all their children and grandchildren.

Looking for their life lessons, I asked, "What do you know for sure?"

Deborah responded, "I know that we are about God, family, the United States, and Texas."

Bruce added, "There was a time when we both had some serious health issues. I actually posted my feelings on Facebook. I said I was part of a very loving family of very intelligent, bright people of faith and if the voice that matters the most knows how I felt about it I would say, I'm glad to be part of it all."

Additionally, Deborah said, "I know for sure that we belong in Texas; it is the heart of our family and if it is the heart of our family, it is our heart. I think that says it all. We are thrilled to be here."

On The Farm Day by Stephanie Baker

Nature Discovery Camp occurred June 25-29. On Tuesday we had our "On the Farm" day!

Campers planted cucumbers and dill seeds to take home. Then they used organic cucumbers and fresh dill to make their own jar of refrigerator pickles. Keith student Nolan Maxian was excited about his jar of pickles!

We also had a three guest speakers because FFA high school students visited with our campers and talked to us about their animals.

Emily Dennison brought her sweet goat Tripp to camp. She is the daughter of Tracey Dennison, a second grade teacher at Swenke.

Molly Covey, a student at Keith, enjoyed petting a bunny on the same day. All the students loved their day at the farm during the Nature Discovery Day!

Ready to Grow Gardens is owned and operated by Stephanie Baker in Cypress, Texas. Stephanie earned her Texas Master Gardener Certification from the Texas Cooperative Extensive and Harris County Master Gardener Association in June of 2003.

Helping to keep you healthy...

by Don Crowley, Store Manager

It is so hard to believe that another summer is passing us by and we are heading into a new school year! I'm not sure that everyone is aware, but your Fairfield Walgreens administers Meningitis shots. If your son or daughter is heading off to college and they need to be vaccinated, come on down to the store anytime we are open. We can get you in and out, no appointments necessary! In addition to Meningitis we give Shingrix, Pneumovax, T-Dap, Flu, Hepatitis A, Hepatitis A/B, HPV, MMR, and Typhoid shots, too.

A new feature we rolled out in May is called Pharmacy Express Pickup. Walgreens Express Pickup is an easy to use, convenient tool for our patients. Patients are invited to prepay for their prescriptions and use the Walgreens Express Pickup line to pick up their prescriptions. When they come into our store, a pharmacy team member simply scans their pass and then scans the prescription leaflet to complete the patient's transaction.

Download the Walgreen App to your phone. There, you can refill by scan, see your Rx status & history and transfer prescriptions. You can chat with a Pharmacy Professional to get answers, see the history of all of your immunizations that you have been given, shop for products and services, view the weekly ad and clip coupons. You can also view all of the photo services we have to offer. Order photo's from your gallery, Facebook, Twitter, Instagram straight from the app! It's a very useful app; I promise you'll love it once you discover it!

Enroll for Text Messaging! Once your prescriptions are ready or your photo orders are ready, you'll receive a text message notifying you that your order is ready.

Another service we really enjoy delivering, is setting up Immunization Clinics. For instance, if your business or organization has 25 or more individuals interested in getting their annual flu shot, we will come to you on the date of your choice. Another example: This past spring we had a 100+ T-Dap (tetanus) clinic at a local metal building manufacturing facility.

We are also a drop off and pick up site for Fed Ex Ground and Express. This service is for those of you who do not like packages sitting on your front door step insecure.

We've got Western Union if you need to send or receive money. For those who need a passport photo, we can do that on the spot. We can do posters and banners for parties. We have a large array of giftable / creative photo items. We can do business cards as well (Order Online).

We also offer propane exchange. We sell stamps to save you time from making a trip to the post office. We even have a Red Box, where you can rent movies and games.

We're not a perfect store, but our team does care about our customers. If you have any concern or question, please reach out to anyone on our team. If the team is unable to answer your question, please reach out to leadership or myself. We would be happy to help you. The number to the store is 832-349-7252.

Thank you,

Don Crowley-Store Manager, Fairfield Walgreens
