Removal of Tree Stakes

Staking a new tree gives the root system a chance to establish itself in the soil and provide the tree with a strong anchor. The stakes are not meant to be permanent and should be removed to benefit further growth and strengthening of the tree. In general, the tree should not need the support for more than six months or a year or after one growing season. After that, stakes left too long can hinder development. Stakes and wires are also unsightly and over time become increasingly difficult to remove.

The summer isn't over yet, don't let your kids out of sight! Even though your little frogs have taken lessons and had a confidence boost with their water skills, it is still important to keep them in arms-reach! All weak and non-swimmers, including those in a lifejacket and at the wade pool, need to be within an arms-reach of an adult at all times.

Fall Webworms

Webworms can be found on a variety of trees and are most well-known for the webbing they create on the tips of branches. Webworms are caterpillars, or larvae, of a moth. Caterpillars cause damage by feeding on foliage that is inside the protective webbing.

There are 2-4 generations of webworms that occur each year. The first generation appears April- May and the last generation occurs in the late fall. The last generation is the most damaging generation, which provides these creatures with the name fall webworm.

Webworm larvae are about an inch long when fully grown. They are pale green to yellow with tufts of long hairs projecting from their body. Most people notice webbing that webworms create on the tips of branches. Webworms feed within the webbing and use it as protection from predators. When the caterpillars run out of foliage to feed on, they expand the web to encompass new leaves.

To manage webworms, the size and accessibility of the tree needs to be considered. Egg masses can be pruned from trees before they hatch in early spring. Egg masses are on the underside of leaves and are covered with hairs. Small webs can also be pruned from the tree when they begin to form in the spring. Larger webs can be knocked out of the tree or opened with a stick or jet of water which will allow predators inside the web to feed on caterpillars. Do NOT use fire to burn the web from trees! This causes more damage to the tree than if the caterpillars continued to feed.

Insecticides are also available for webworm management. Look for active ingredients such as Bacillus thuringiensis var. kurstaki (this product specifically targets caterpillars), spinosad, azadirachtin, or pyrethrins. Webs need to be opened before treatment with a pesticide so that pesticide gets inside the web where caterpillars are located.

Please note that webbing will remain in trees even after caterpillars are dead. Webbing needs to be removed by you or a strong weather event.

Wildflower Notes

Here's what's likely to be blooming, fruiting or setting seed in Central Texas this time of year. Look for these native plants around town, at the Wildflower Center and perhaps in your own backyard!

Chocolate Daisy (Berlandiera lyrata)

Flower scents get compared to lots of things: honey, grape Kool-Aid, citrus fruits, baby powder — but chocolate? Now that's something special. The small, yellow flower known as chocolate daisy is truly in a fragrance class all its own: the confection class. But a noteworthy scent (which some say is enhanced by plucking a ray flower) isn't all this perennial beauty has to offer. Bushy, low-growing Berlandiera lyrata makes a lovely addition to garden beds, adding velvety foliage and bright clusters of cheery yellow blooms along edges and borders (ray petals also have characteristic red "threads" on their back sides, adding interest from various perspectives). This native Texan grows in dry, rocky soils and can handle heat and sun — though, like many of us, it droops a bit during the hottest parts of the day. But this chocolate doesn't melt; instead, flowers bounce back during cooler morning hours. Curiously, it's also highly deer resistant. Guess a love of all things chocolate is one thing deer and humans don't have in common.

Jimsonweed (Datura wrightii)

Could there be a plant more beautiful, beguiling and storied than Datura wrightii? Commonly known as jimsonweed, thorn apple and angel trumpet, this striking annual boasts blooms so big they seem almost illogical — not unlike longhorns having to tote around those epic extremities on their heads. Jimsonweed's leaves are a deep, soft-looking green (a lovely contrast to luminous white flowers); its seed capsules are crazy spiky and filled with what look like plant brains (for real!); and nectar from their nocturnal blooms supports hawkmoths, which is undeniably cool. But be forewarned: All parts of this plant are toxic and, if consumed, can be lethal. And the mystique doesn't stop there. Jimsonweed's narcotic properties have been known since before recorded history and once figured in both Aztec medicine and the religious ceremonies of indigenous southwestern tribes. This fleur fatale is certainly alluring, but unlike our chocolate flower, Datura wrightii is notoriously stinky.
