Triumph of The Thin Man

By Art Dlugach

He is no fugitive, but he is on the run, and, at times, he has quite a fan base. Taber Badar, born in Pakistan, spends a lot of time on the shoulders of Highway 71 in the Bee Cave-Lakeway area. That's why you might have seen him. As if he needs to be described, with the size of his audience, Taber is 54-years-old with a trim, but no way skinny, well-conditioned body. Might be the "most-ripped" trim you've ever scrutinized.

"Of course I'm concerned," he admits, regarding his version of a cross country course, but, "I really haven't discovered an alternate place to run." We'll say right now, akin to the warning on cigarettes, don't try this without a signed okay from your doctor, coach or family.

"Many people know me," Taber said, regarding the non-pedestrians on 71, and, "watch out for me," but he adds a scary thought: "Sometimes I have seen them looking at cell phones {and therefore} drifting toward me." The double no-no: paying attention to cells and runners while driving.

Badar's style is what I first noticed: he's not walking, no, but it's those itty-bitty steps that sets him apart, besides the venue. For us older sports fans, we might declare, "Golly, I've seen that foot action before." Because we grew up seeing Babe Ruth hit home runs in black and white newsreels, and the movie film of the 1920s and '30s would show him—in double speed—run the bases in pigeon-toe tempo.

Indeed, Taber probably would not have beaten the Babe homeplate to homeplate, but this Texan since he was 15, would have run him down over his personal goals: "10-12 miles in the morning, six to eight in the early evening."

I guess distance trumps style any day.

Badar began running at 18, influenced by a friend, "who would come over after dinner, and we would run in the neighborhood." Later, he "organized" this workout club for soloists, because, "I couldn't find competition for tennis in college.

"I needed the exercise; I needed to re-create myself. I started running longer and longer."

The graduate of Humble High near Houston added he has not run a marathon but will someday face off with the 26.2-mile challenge. I'd bet 18 miles a day would comprise sufficient preparation for the world's most famous long-distance event.

"I've slowed a bit," Taber relates. "Two and a half hours for 12 miles." 12-minute miles. Fast enough when the finish line is halfway across town.

And, what does the runner believe is the rush? (Choose your definition.) "It's meditative; it keeps me on an even keel, exhilarated, vibrant."

There are mornings Taber thought, "{I} just did not feel like I wanted to go anywhere." His response to his own dilemma: "Ultimately, I forced myself to do it, and it was fun. People waved at me; it was a nice experience.

"If your habit is movement, you'll continue that habit. {When} your body is in that mode, {you} need to do it. All about joy, elation, energy. That's what we are here to do."

This man, who is eloquent with words and action, would like to run forever, because it's a way "of fighting back against time."

Lake Travis Film Festival

2003, when the state saw $4.1 billion in sales.

When you look at the thriving arts and culture industries within specific cities, the picture is equally as clear. Film is a notable contributor to these dollars. In fact, in 2011 the City of Austin commissioned an economic impact study, which estimates the total economic impact of just film and visual media, totaling over $280 million annually.

This is a significant reason why you see so many corporate and private patrons of the arts and culture as they understand that investing in the creative endeavors of their community has a direct impact on its economy. A growing cultural investment are film festivals, highlighting independent film productions that serve as a draw for locals and out-of-towners alike. Film festivals impact the local economy in three specific ways:

- Visitor Spending: This means factoring in overnight spending among people who have travelled from out of town and have rented cars, are booking nights in local hotels and eating in local restaurants, purchasing other local goods and services and visiting other destination attractions.
- Day Spending: This has a positive impact on the local economy,

Like most states with thriving arts and culture communities, Texas not only benefits from a positive economic impact from the arts, but that impact is highly significant. Art and culture industries generated $5.1 billion in sales for the state and nearly $320 million in annual state sales tax back in 2013. Plus, those numbers are only showing signs of growing as art and culture sales are up 24.6% from which includes people from local towns, within driving distance to the events, who have come for the day and are visiting our establishments and filling restaurants.

- Local Spending: This includes activities from participants who reside in the immediate area who are more likely to eat out during the days of the events and purchase featured products and merchandise, because they are away from home and immersed in an activity.

Texas' Arts and Culture Industry also plays a major role, creating and sustaining jobs. Directly, the industry creates, distributes, and sells products and services to national and international markets. This creates a demand for nearly 10,000 Arts and Culture Industry businesses located throughout Texas, employing over 110,000 workers. Additionally, supporting a strong arts culture has a noted ripple effect in the jobs market, attracting innovation workers and luring cutting-edge companies to set up shop within cities who demonstrate a vibrant and thriving arts and culture scene.

Film festivals even help to merge art and technology through a variety of visual media that often include virtual reality, gaming and other motion art media in addition to traditional films. The significance of this is powerful in an area that is amplifying its technology markets, offering a powerful exhibition platform to showcase a variety of arts and technology projects to a broad audience in a fun and entertaining environment.

Texas is succeeding in all of these fronts, and proven by the numbers, is showing no signs of slowing down. An investment in the arts, culture and local film industry just makes good dollars and cents.

Hill Country Galleria Announces New Dining Concepts And Retailers Coming Soon

Lifestyle and entertainment center Hill Country Galleria is pleased to announce several new dining concepts and retailers opening this summer and into fall, including premium performance apparel retailer Athleta, local pet supply resource Healthy Pet, and PopRock Austin Pop-Up Restaurant. The Galleria is also excited to introduce a newly revamped menu at The Ginger Man, with a renewed focus on serving the local community. In addition, Kendra Scott will host a pop-up store during the Galleria's signature summer event series, Ladies Night Out.

Women's athletic apparel retailer Athleta will debut at Hill Country Galleria in early fall in Suite G-120, next door to Café Blue. Founded in 1998, the brand integrates performance and technical features across its collection to carry a woman through her life in motion—from yoga and training to commute and travel. The Galleria location marks the third store for the brand in the Austin and surrounding area.

Hill Country Galleria is also excited to welcome Austin-based Healthy Pet to its eclectic tenant mix. Located at Suite R-140, across from Whole Foods, the pet supply retailer is slated to open by the end of the year. Healthy Pet opened its first location in June 2012, and this location will be the fourth for the brand. In addition to carrying premium pet products, Healthy Pet seeks to be a resource for the community, whether by hosting local animal adoption events or educating pet parents about the best products for their pets. The retailer will also offer three self-serve dog wash stations at this location. Hill Country Galleria has made strides to ensure that the property is welcoming for both human and pet guests. In 2018, the property was the first in Texas to introduce DogSpots, climate-controlled, high-tech sidewalk dog houses, ideal for a pet-friendly shopping experience as well as new amenities like pet waste stations, dog water fountains, and more.

PopRock Austin Pop-Up Restaurant will open its doors at Hill Country Galleria in late summer 2019, located at Pad 9-101, behind Oriental Rug Gallery. The new concept will be a coffee shop by day, bringing back Lakeway's Java Dive Organic Cafe, offering house-roasted organic coffee and healthy breakfast and lunch fare. In the evenings and on weekends, PopRock will transform into a pop-up restaurant, where guests can regularly enjoy new and unique dining experiences as different local chefs take over the space. The space will also be available for private catered events.

In addition to the new openings, The Ginger Man at Hill Country Galleria is pleased to announce Sebastien Caillabet, formerly of deli and restaurant Lox, Box & Barrel, as the new general manager to the specialty beer bar and eatery. Caillabet and the Galleria team have developed a revamped menu now available in the restaurant, featuring new takes on classic sandwiches, like the French Dip and Reuben; favorite bar snacks, including a house charcuterie board, pretzel & beer cheese, and loaded waffle fries; health-conscious vegetarian, vegan, and gluten-free options, like the Bee Cave Buddha Bowl, Hummus Plate, and Veggie Delight sandwich; along with delicious desserts. Opened in April 2018, The Ginger Man at Hill Country Galleria offers a selection of over 60 international, domestic, and craft options on tap and in bottles, daily lunch and dinner, weekend brunch, and a kids menu. With a spacious patio and located just steps away from the Galleria's Central Plaza, The Ginger Man is perfect for enjoying a meal or cold beverage during the property's open-to-the-public community events throughout the year.

On Tuesdays, July 23rd and August 27th, the Galleria will host its signature summer event series, Ladies Night Out, where guests will enjoy an evening of exclusive offers, giveaways, beauty, shopping, happy hours, and more. Austin-based lifestyle brand Kendra Scott will host a pop-up store on each of these nights where guests are welcome to try on jewelry and enjoy complimentary cocktails and a photo booth. The brand will donate 15 percent of sales from each event to the Bee Cave Arts Foundation.

Hill Country Galleria is situated in Bee Cave, west of downtown Austin in the beautiful Texas Hill Country. Host to more than 150 family-friendly community events a year, including the Lone Star Farmers Market, free community workouts, live music series, and more, Hill Country Galleria offers a vibrant, comfortable, and convenient shopping and entertainment destination where life and style connect.

NATURE WATCH

by Jim and Lynne Weber

Night Bloomers

Many night blooming flowers have white or light-colored blossoms, a strong fragrance (although not always to human noses), and are open by night and close by day. These flowers are extremely important nectar sources for pollinators, and they are attracted to these flowers' nectar mainly by scent. Two of our best night blooming native plants are Berlandier's Trumpets (Acleisanthes obtusa) and Jimsonweed (Datura wrightii).

Also known as Vine Four O'Clock, Berlandier's Trumpets is an upright perennial herb or climbing vine up to 6 feet long, easily controlled but often clambering over shrubs and small trees if left unchecked. Its opposite, bright green leaves are triangular shaped, about 1.5 inches long, with slightly wavy edges. But it is its white to light pink trumpet-shaped flowers, about 2 inches long, that bloom from April to December, producing a fragrant scent when open at night. Berlandier's Trumpet does well in full sun to part shade, is drought tolerant, and easy to grow and maintain.

Jimsonweed is a 3 to 6 foot tall stoutly branched herb, with alternate, coarse, large gray-green leaves that are broad at the base and pointed at the tip. While its foliage is often described as rank-smelling, its flowers are sweetly fragrant white trumpets, up to 8 inches long, sometimes tinged with purple at the edges. It blooms from May to November, and its flowers close during the heat of the day. The fruit of this plant is a very distinctive spiny, globular capsule up to 1.5 inches in diameter, which opens fully when ripe. Jimsonweed has several other common names such as Sacred Thorn-apple, Angel Trumpet, Devil's Trumpet, and Sacred Datura. Some of these names refer to its use as a hallucinogen in Native American ceremonies, but it is important to note that all parts of this plant are toxic to humans.

Both of these native night blooming species attract several species of Sphinx moths (sometimes known as hawkmoths or hummingbird moths) as well as other pollinating insects such as long-tongued bees, butterflies, and hummingbirds. But it is the Jimsonweed that has mastered the art of mutualism. While it is common for this plant to benefit from its relationship with the Carolina Sphinx (Manduca sexta) in the form of pollination, in turn it provides nectar for the adult moth and is the host plant for the moth's caterpillars. These large caterpillars (known to gardeners as 'hornworms'), consume many or all of the Jimsonweed's leaves. But the plant is prepared for the attack, storing resources in its massive root enabling it to produce more leaves. In effect, it grows its own pollinators to ensure its reproductive success!
